

INTRODUCTION

DAN FAILL

Our speaker today is Dan Faill (pronounced – FAIL). He has spoken to thousands of college students across the country. Rather than listing off a resume of jobs and accomplishments that most of you will tune out anyway, here are some fun facts:

In high school, Dan won a national championship for acting...as a mime. He was also nominated for the senior superlative of class clown but came in second.

After his first semester in college he changed his major from Acting because his professor told him he'd never make it because his eyebrows were too expressive for the silver screen.

After graduating from the University North Carolina at Wilmington, Dan knew he wanted to get a masters degree close to home, so he went to the University of the Pacific...on the exact opposite coast. Apparently following directions has never been his strong suit.

Dan is here with us today to share some thoughts and personal stories about _____.

Please join me in welcoming Dan Faill.
